At a funeral, Brent can't help but notice a woman attending in what looks like just a black shirt. From the glimpse of panties as she sits down, to the knowing grin she gives him as he leaves, there's something special about this encounter. The reception brings a debate about whether she's wearing a shirt or a dress - but the answer stops mattering once it's crumpled up on the floor!

In summers my wife wears only a t-shirt at home (without any undergarments) and when my or her male friends visits she is quite vulnerable to overexpose herself. I tried talking to her which annoyed her and she says that "Should she wear a proper / formal dress at the comfort of her home also" I quite agree with her but what about the friends who come by....can ask them not to visit. PLEASE ADVICE
